

Economic Recovery Seminar Draws Raves from Small Business Leaders

WOODBIDGE, N.J., March 26th, 2009 – Underscoring its dedication to supporting and promoting best business practices, Extensis sponsored the Economic Recovery Seminar last week in Woodbridge, NJ. With over 120 small business owners and executives in attendance, the seminar got very positive reviews from attendees, calling it “very informative and valuable”.

“This was a great seminar”, said Diane O’Leary, President of the O’Leary Group, “having three different companies discuss the issues from their differing perspectives really added value and depth to the information.”

The program, entitled “Practical Advice For Managing Your Business Through Tough Economic Times” was designed to help New Jersey businesses understand how the sweeping changes proposed by the Economic Stimulus Package impact businesses. Understanding these forces should enable business leaders to implement steps to minimize their risks from the current economic downturn and potentially position themselves for growth in the recovery ahead.

The fact-filled presentation was conducted by subject matter experts:

Tom Mulhare — Partner in Charge, Financial Services, Amper
Practical Advice: Managing Your Business in the Current Economy

Dan Gibson & Lori McMahon—Tax Services, Amper
Tax Update and the Stimulus Package — Planning considerations in today’s economy

Donald Mallo, esq. — Vice President of Human Resources, Extensis
Employment Update – Recent changes in employment law and regulation impacting small business

Tim Smith — Senior Vice President, Wachovia Commercial Banking Group
Credit Solutions – Innovative ideas to combat the credit crunch.

“With all of the late-breaking economic news and regulatory changes,” said Dan Sheridan, Chief Marketing Officer of Extensis, “we thought it was a great time to review the evolving changes in today’s volatile marketplace and look ahead to help New Jersey Businesses chart a path to recovery. We think this was a great beginning.”
